Creative Process

There were a few first in this piece for me. First of all I experimented with different brushes which was new to me. The cloud brush made it easier to add texture to the clouds and add a bit more depth. I also used some of the built in brushes I had never used like one for the foliage. This immensely helped in the process of creating the trees. I also used layers much more effectively than last piece and it helped out when I needed to add something and didn't want to mess with things on other layers.

Academic Integrity Reminder

Do	Don't
- Create original artwork - express yourself! - Focus on developing your drawing and visualization skills. Effort is a large consideration in the grade. - Post your work-in-progress regularly. In addition to being able to see your progression, this serves as proof that the work is yours. - Seek references for inspiration - Cite and credit sources clearly - leave no ambiguity. - Seek out tutorials to learn techniques. Cite these as well. - Complete work in-class as much as possible, showing instructors your progress along the way. Ask for help and guidance in class	Plagiarise artwork Misrepresenting another's work or ideas as your own will result in failing the class, being reported to the university, and disciplinary action. Rely on AI tools for a significant portion of the final work. - As long as the use is explicitly disclosed, minimal use of AI tools for the brainstorming phase is permitted, but cannot be used for final results. That said, over-reliance on AI may result in deductions to the 'Effort' grade in the rubric. Tracing from a photo - EXCEPTION: if it is explicitly allowed in the assignment description, and the photo is credited. - Photo textures can be used as long as credited, and there isn't an over-reliance on them. Fan Art and Master Copies - You are welcome to produce fan art or master copies on your own time for fun as long as sources are explicitly credited in any public posting. However, fan art or master copies cannot be turned in as an assignment for this particular class. If your illustration or something very similar would show up in a reverse Image search, that is a bad sign!
